Sightseeing

- 1 Oberbaumbrücke
While Germany was divided, the Oberbaum bridge was a border crossing for pedestrians. Since the fall of the Berlin Wall, it now connects the two halves of the district of Friedrichshain-Kreuzberg.
- 2 The Sunken Ship
MS Dr. Ingrid Wengler Ship - It was named after the owner's true love, a surgeon at the Dreifaltigkeits-Hospital in Lippstadt.
- 3 Molecule Man
Molecule Man is a series of aluminium sculptures, designed by American artist Jonathan Borofsky, installed at various locations around the world.
- 4 Wenden Park
Wenden-Park is part of Stralau Peninsula. The park includes the Friedhof Alt-Stralau church.
- 5 Treptower Park
Partly wooded park on the Spree with a promenade, biergarten, Soviet war memorial and observatory.
- 6 Plänterwald
The name Plänterwald derives from the German word Plenterwald, referring to a timber forest. Now part of Berlin, it was part of the former borough of Treptow and the site of its former town hall.
- 7 Funkhaus
Founded in a former plywood factory, Funkhaus became the focal point for East German broadcast in 1951. Today resident producers harness the great acoustic setting. Funkhaus regularly hosts a variety of artists.
